

Master's Education Core

The School of Graduate Studies of Bryan College of Health Sciences has identified an essential core of Master's level education. All programs leading to a Master's degree include coursework in research methods, theoretical foundations, applied statistics, evidence based practice, and advanced professional roles; a capstone experience; and an applied practicum.